Neapolis School Donates Socks

One day at the end of last week a young man came into our office with a large bundle on his shoulder and immediately visions of a visit from Santa Claus" came into our mind, but we were doomed to disappointment, it was something far better-a gift from the Neapolis school boys and girls for Tommy at the front, 55 pairs of nice warm socks. These socks have been sent on to Tommy Atkins girl at Calgary and no doubt the boys and girls will be able to spend a happier Christmas for the thought that they have done something to help in relieving some of the distress of the soldiers. ର୍ଗୁଟ ର୍ଗ୍ରାଟ ଗ୍ରାଟ SEASON'S GREETINGS

OF THE PIONEER

May Christmas fill your heart with gladness, Bring you joy and banish sadness. And the New Year bring you peace, Prosperity, and health at least.

It almost seems this year that because of world-wide conditions that the spirit of Christmas and New Year's is somewhat of a mockery because of so much distress, cruelty and hatred, but just the same this is a season of the year when all should drop their hard feelings and remember the little babe in the manger who brought the glad tidings of "Peace on Earth, good will towards men."

The editor of the Pioneer wishes to thank the patrons of the paper and also its many readers for the support rendered through the past year and also wishes them every good thing through the coming year as well as a Happy Christmas.

Springside Concert The War Situation

A very successful Christmas and Patriotic Concert was held in the Springside schoolhouse on Friday, December 19th.

The entertainment consisted of drills, recitations, etc., and particularly pleasing was a drill of "The Seasons" by twelve pupils appropriately dressed to represent each month. The hit of the evening was made by Mr. Law rence McNaughton in "Women's Rights", in which he was assisted by Miss Spicer and Air. Stanley Hardy. No one who watched him need take any further lessons in the art of house work if example is sufficient. The "Good Night drill" and the pantomime "Sweet Hour of Prayer" were very good. Near the close of the pro gramme an excellent talk was given by Rev. Marshall of Didsbury showing our Patriotic duties and a collection for the patriotic fund was then taken up. Short speeches by Messrs. Geo. Sexsmith and the Chairman, Hardy, were much appreciated.

The work done by the mothers and children for the Sunshine Circle were displayed. Conspicuous among these was a quilt pieced by the children. The proceeds amounted to $24.32 and much praise is due to Miss Kernick encouragement.

In northern France the Allies are still gaining steadily but the complete arrangements which the Germans have made for defence of every foot of the ground has necessarily made any great advance slow. It is reported that the Germans have evacuated Middlekerke, and that cavalry patrols of the Allies are already in the outskirts of Cortemarck and Thielt. There has been consid rable movement of German troops in West Flanders.

The postage stamp is always up-to-date and Cuba gives us the latest example of keeping up with the times. An entirely new set has just becn is sued showing on the regular postal issues a map of the island with lines making the principal steamship connections with neighboring countries. The special delivery stamp is even more interesting. It shows an aeropiane of modern type flying over Moro Castle at the entrance to Havana harbor. LETTERS TO ENEMY COUNTRIES

They May be Sent Through Agency of Neutral Country

Neutral Country

The government has received a communication from the foreign office giving the regulations which must be observed in regard to forwarding letters or money to British subjects detained in an enemy country. Neither letters nor money can be forwarded through the foreign office or the United States embassy in London to individual British subjects abroad. Private letters to Germany and Austria-Hungary, through neutral countries, are now allowed to be forwarded subject to the usual conditions of censorship. Letters cannot, however, be forwarded direct to Germany or Austria-Hungary. British, subjects and others wishing to communicate with friends in enemy countries must forward their letters through an agency in a neutral country, and correspondents may select their own agency. Messra Cook & Son have expressed their willingness to arrange for the transmission of such letters, and applications should be made to them.

New, rich blood is what is most needed in the decilining years to keep up energy and vitality. That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a wonderful help in maintaining good health and prolonging life is attested by the writer of this letter:

Mr. Stephen J. Leard, North Tyron, P.E.I., writes: "At seventy-five years of age my heart gave out and became very irregular and weak in action and would palpitate. My nerves also became weak, and I could do nothing but lie in bed in a languishing condition, losing strength and weight. In that condition I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and am cured. Had I not obtained this treatment i would now be in the box with the roof over my nose. At eighty-one I have an energy which means go, and I am writing this letter so that old people like myself may prolong their health and strength by using this great medicine." 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. Atrocky Stories

Atrocity Stories

It is a matter of justice to say that the certain and authenticated accounts by known competent witnesses show humaning and kindness on the part of the compatants, both Germans and the allies. War begets not only horrible things but a nervous state of mind, that briginates and is credulous of stories, of horrible things. That there is some reality of fact and a wide range of fancy as to "atrocities" is probably true of all wars. It is to the glory of human nature if on the whole it does not frequently abuse the ruthless opportunity and license of war.

Antwerp's Cathedral

Antwerp cathedral is the largest and most beautiful Gothic in the Antwerp cathedral is the largest and most beautiful Gothic in the Netherlands, with a roof supported by 125 pillars, and an exquisite spire 403 feet high, in which hangs a splendid carillon of bells. 'he interior is enriched by Reuben's three masterpieces the "Descent from the Cross," the "Elevation of the Cross," and "The Assumption." Near by, in the Place Verte, is the statue of Reubens in bronze, the figure being 13 feet, mounted on a pedestal 20 feet in height. Next to the cathedral the Hotel de Ville is the chief architectural feature of Antwerp, close to which are the famous sixteenth century guild houses belonging to the different corporations of the city. The Hotel de Ville was built in 1564, and is replete with priceless tapestry, furniture, sculpture and paintings. In the Grand Place, on the west site of which the hotel stands, is one of the most interesting bronze fountains in Europe. It is surmounted by a statue of Salvius Brabo, a mythical hero, who defeated and cut off the hand of the giant Antigonus. The latter used to exact a heavy toil from vessels entering the Scheldt, and ruthlessly cut off and threw into the river a hand of every shipmaster who relessly cut off and threw into the river a hand of every shipmaster who refused to pay. Hence, says the legend, the name of the town, Antwerp, from hand werpen—werpen meaning to throw.

Bowels Out of Order?

We believe Rexall Orderlies are the best bowel remedy made. They taste like candy. Soothing and easy in action, they do not cause griping, nauses, purging or excessive looseness, as harsh physics do. Rexall Orderlies tone and strengthen the nerves and muscles of the bowels and promptly relieve constipation, helping to overcome its cause, and at the same time removing the chief cause of sick headaches, billousness, bad broath, nervousness and other ills caused by inactive bowels. In vest pocket tin boxes; 10c, 25c, 50c.

You can buy Rexall Orderlies only at The Rexall Stores, and in this town only of us. H. W. Chambers, Didabury.

"But of course I'll go to her," said Barbara, "I have got an hour before Miss Lacy and Mr. Osborne arrive. Give a message to Mrs. Gray, will you, Flora, and tell her that I have just gone to Vauxhall Bridge Road, but will be back, whatever happens, before ten.

You ain't afraid of the fog, are i, miss?" said Flora.
No, no, of course not, I could walk re blindfold."

"The messenger said he'd wait for you, miss, so you won't be unprotected."

"Then, that's all right," said Barbara—she ran to her room, put on her fur coat and cap, and then rushed downstairs. Unseen by anyone, she left Dean's Yard, and accompanied by the messenger, a red-haired boy with a squint she walked as fast as she could down Victoria street. She was about half-way down when a firm hand was laid on her arm. It caught her slim litt! arm with great vigor. "My child—my little daughter—turn and look at me, my little daughter. I am your mother, I brought you into the world, I have the first claim on you, and I mean to enforce it—yes, to enforce it. Come with me, my dex, don't turn from the woman who—Oh! my God! how hungry I am to kiss you!" Then, that's all right," said Bar-

Barbara's little face showed out of Barbara's little face showed out of the gathering fog as white as death. "Oh, but I must not stay with you," she said, "I must not—I dare not. An-other time, if you are my mother, but let me go free now, please, please! Oh, you frighten me when you look at me like that!"

me like that!"

The messenger, who had been wistling and chuckling, turned sharply at his moment; the woman flickered her eyelids. In a moment both Barbara's arm were clutched behind her, a hand was put across her mouth, and she was dragged down a side street. This street led into another, and yet into another, until at last they stopped before the door of a house which seemed to be of the poorest, dirtiest and most revolting nanouse which seemed to be of the poorest, dirtiest, and most revolting nature. The boy still clutched Barbara.
She looked wildly round her. The fog lay black and heavy in this cul-de-sac, and women of the commonest, lowest type, came out of it and gazed at the girl, and then venished into its depths.

Meanwhile the other woman opened the door of the house with a latch-key, dragged Barbara in, and upstairs

"There," she said, turning to the byy: "the; e's your half-sovereign. You hive done well. Now leave us."

"Oh, but please, please don't leave me!" said Barbara; for even the by seemed a refuge from this woman, who wore a twisted mouth and walked with a line. with a limp.

The girl suddenly gathered up all her courage. "I won't stop here, and you cannot compel me," she said. "Go," said Mrs. Dunbar to the boy. As she spoke she threw out her arms in a theatrical manner. "Girl," she

"If ever you let out what I have done," she said, "you know the consequences. You lose your post as errand boy at Ferris's, and then where will you be? Keep your tongue silent, and nothing will happen. Now go."

The boy vanished. "Somehow I don't like it as much as when her talked to me last night," I. thought, "and when I got the haddress of the little lidy out of Hannah. I don't like it abit now; there's my arf-quid, to be sure, but I don't like it, not me. Pore little lidy, her heyes 'ud melt down into yer."

Meanwhile Florence Dunbar returned to Harbara. Barbara was crouching on a broken chair in the back part of the room, her little cap lay on the table. The poor child little guessed what an awful place she had been taken to, for if Chesney street was bad, Eve's Court was many degrees worse. Here even the police would not venture except in twos. There was not a house in the court which was not the habitation of thieves and worse. The women had an expression on their faces which caused the innocent girl to shudder, but alas, alas! the one she felt the deepest antipathy to was the woman who spoke of her as her child.

"Now girl," said Mrs. Dunbar, "raise your head, and don't be silly. If you are good to me, I'll be good to you—

"Now girl," said Mrs. Dunbar, "raise your head, and don't be silly. If you are good to me, I'll be good to you—yes, and very good. You don't suppose I'm going to keep you long in this hole? No fear. But Barbara'—the voice suddenly softened, and the harsh face flushed—"I am hungry for you, little girl. I am y r mother."

"I cannot believe it," said poor Barbara. Barbara.

said Mrs. Russell, turning with rage in her face to the woman.

"Why, there was a boy who came round last night, a boy who used to be a friend of Dan's, and he asked and begged to see Miss Barbara—Miss Barbara, he said, had promised him that if he was a good boy, she would help him to do his lessons, and I thought no harm in giving him her address

"Then you have done it!" said Mrg. Russell. "For God's sake, woman, leave the room now, or I won't be accountable for what I say to you. Sir, the child has been kidnapped, and by a wicked woman! Sir! You won't leave a stone unturned to save her? Oh! the little darlin!! What is to be done?"

"We'll do our best, Mrs. Russell. I see by your face that you are honest and true."

"That I am, sir, and I would lay down my life for Miss Barbara. I love her so fondly."

He went immediately to Scotland Yard, gave as good a description as he could of Barbara, of the boy, and of the woman who to a certain extent had been described to him by Mr. Sunningley the evening before. The consequence was, that a detective in private clothes came immediately to see Mrs. Gray, in order to get a fuller description of the person who had followed them on the day they had left Vauxhali Bridge Road to go back to Dean's Yard. to Dean's Yard.

Another detective was set to watch for the boy. Dan was questioned; he said he knew nothing about him, that he was no friend of his. As to poor Hannah, she was almost beside herself with grief at her carelessness and "wickedness," as Mrs. Russell expressed it. In short, the entire house at Vauxhall Bridge Road was in a turmoil, caused by the fact that little Barbara was lost.

Miss Octavia, who had been a shade better and was beginning to revive and to try to pass the hours until her dear little girl came again, went from one fainting fit to another. Miss Lavinia, in a rage, shook her and said that at this rate she would be a ruined woman, with so many doctor's bills to meet.

Mrs. Russell, who had teen listening in her own little parlor, now sailed into the hall. She was struck once again by the gracious and, as she expressed it, "elegent appearance" of the young man who had come in search of Barbara.

"Sir! sir!" she said, "whatever is wrong?"

"I don't know, Mrs. Russell. I am afraid something is very wrong. A boy arrived at Dan's Yard this morning about nine o'clock with a message purporting to be from you; to say that Miss Octavia Henslowe was very ill, and that the doctor would not answer for her life; unless Miss Barbara

PROFESSOR HAD VISION OF WAR

Warned England to Prepare Against Frussia's Ambition to Become Dominant World Power

Since the private individuals in any civilized country do not hate the private individuals of any other civilized country, why are governments hostile to one another? Why are not nations controlled by the influences that control individuals? Would not the question of war or peace, if submitted to a referendum of all the people, have prevented any modern war? Are groups of men prompted by motives and led by forces that do not move individual men? Is it true that for mystical reasons men are sane, kindly, humane individually, and insane, cruel, inhuman collectively?

Naive questions, perhaps, but they lie behind much of the discussion of the causes of this ghastly fratricide that has torn civilization apart. If, indeed it be true that the destiny is guided not by human intelligence or human will tut by a blind, unconscious, unknowable, irresistible force, in whose hands nations and races are only playthings, then efforts to elude their fate are as vain and foolish as would be an attempt to stop a cyclone or an earthquake.

That thought is one of the many striking things in a striking book is triking things in a striking book just now in vogue—a fragmentary and unfinished and one-sided book, as suggestive for what it omits as for what it contains, a brave and logical and brilliant book, written last year by the late J. A. Cramb, professor of modern history in Queen's college, London. Its coloriess title, "Germany and England," might well have been "The Necesity and the Beneficence of War." Somewhat thus runs the gifted author's argument:

England should seek to understand Germany, of whose history, literature, and politics, is a fatal delusion, a specious and glittering beauty, a vain ideal, followed by "nerve cranks." In Europe, "every advance in politics or religion has been attended by war." Advance without war in the future will be as impossible as in the past.

And war is not wholly evil. It assumes forms that sometimes are wrapt in a kind of transcendental wonder." In the heroism displayed in war is an element akin to the couring of Captain Sco

Useful Germs

So much has been said and written about germs as disease producing that we are inclined to think of them as only harmful. "Health Notes," the official bulletin of the State Board of Health of Florida reminds us that there are such things as useful germs, it is a fact that they are very, very useful and we would be in a bad way without them. We couldn't make any without them. We couldn't make any without them. We couldn't make any without germs, for that is what ferments are. These ferments change the sugar into alcohol, and that is called alcoholic fermentation. We couldn't make vinegar without them, for that is another process of fermentation. The ferments effect changes producing acetic acid, and that is called acetic acid fermentation, and that is the way vinegar is made. Vanilla is made from the vanilla bean, but the bean has to be fermented, or we would have no vanilla. Leather cannot be tanned, or flax retted but by the sid of germs. Milk would not sour and cheese could not be made, but that germs bring it about. The yeast that is used for making a loaf of bread is a mass of germs. They attack the starch in the flour and liberate a gas, which fills the dough with tiny bubbles, and causes it to "rise" as we say. A disease-producing germ of the gas-producing kind is known and sometimes gets into a wound, and causes the part to swell like the rising of bread.

But more important of all the germs is that great group which tears down vegetable and animal tissue, after it is dead, and nitrifies it, and makes it suitable for plant food again, e amount of life on the earth is determined largely by the activity of this class of germs."

KINGDOM OF HANOVER

May Return Old Hanoverian Kingdom to Power

Kingdom to Power

It is announced from Petrograd that the czar will set up the kingdom of Hanover, now incorporated in Western Prussia, if he crushes Garmany with the aid of the allies. His choice for king will be the young Duke of Brunswick, although the cuke's father, the Duke of Cumberland, is living. The Duke of Cumberland is the heir to the throne of Hanover, a claim he has never been able to enforce. The son is now fighting in the ranks of the kaiser's army.

Hanover opposed Prussia in many wars, starting at least as '2r back as Frederick the Great's time. At the close of the six weeks' war, about half a century ago, Prussia absorbed Hanover and deposed the like of kings. There was a great hubbub in the Prussian royal family when the six sons of the kaiser learned their pretty sister was in love with the young man upon whom the crown of Hanover would have descended, had not the Prussian mailed fist intervened. They sisted that the marriage should not take place unless the Duke of Brunswick formally renounced all claims to the throne of Hanover and swore unconditional allegiance to the house of Hohenzollern. They called upon their sister, as a loyal Hohenzollern, to give up the match unless her husband subordinated himself thoroughly to Hohenzollern.

But the princess declared she would marry the Duke of Brunswick even if it meant exile and impoverishment. Perhaps she had an intuitive feeling that the crown would some time rest that the crown would some time rest on her brow if she stood firm. Many people, unless actually familiar with the ways and customs of the native of India, have little idea as to how superstitio many of these people are, specially with regard to their "caste" system.

In this dis.rict, not very long ago, a coolie, whilst passing through they knew that a few miles distant there was a well equipped hospital, conveyed him to a village close by where he was kept without medical assistance of any kind and in a blazing sun for three days.

When eventually brought into the hospital the man's plight may be better imtagined than described. The surgeon and his assistants managed to keet, him alive, but his face is so disfigured that he is known in the district as the "reache wallah" (bear man). The most extraordinary thing about this case is that the unfortunate person was, during the time he lay in the hospital, considered by the fraternity to be unclean, with the result that his own wife was, through attending to his requirements, thrown out of "ca_te."—The India Gazette.

TERRIFYING SPECTACLE

Flower of Youth of Europe Massacred

"Never in his vision of Inferno did Dante imagine anything to compare with the unspeakable reality of the spectacle of the battlefield of the Marne!"

So wrote Pierre Charton, formerly of Montreal, sighting in the ranks of the French army in Northern ditions. Following the birth of her baby there was general reconciliation on the surface at least.

Stop the Cough.—Coughing is caused by irritation in the respiratory passages and is the effort to dislodge obstructions that come from inflammation of the muscous membrane. Treatment with Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil will allay the inflammation and inconsequence the cough will cease. Try it and you will use no other preparation for a cold.

"We advance with great difficulty. Our boots stick in the mud and clotted blood. A terrible feeling of horror grips us. We march on almost without knowing what we are doing. We are mere automatons, unable to think, stupid, dumb, crazed with horror by the evermity of the cataclysm.

"I read an article in the paper about some one with trouble like mine being helped by Grape-Nuts food and acting on this suggestion. I gave Grape-Nuts a trial. The first dish of this delicious food proved that I had struck the right thing.

"My uncomfortable feelings in stomach disappeared as if by magic and in an incredibly short space of time I was again myself. Since then I have gained 12 pounds in weight through a summer of hard work and realize I am a very different woman, all due to the splendid food, Grape-Nuts." The acts which perhaps have endeared him to Tommy Atkins more than any others were the repeal of piquet duty and the freedom granted to coldiers during manoeuvres.

Until General Smith-Dorrien took command at Aldershot piquets of four or eight men paraded the streets until midnight. General Smith-Dorrien put the soldiers on his honor not to misbehave himself in the public streets and abolished the piquets. They have never been reinstated.

GUARD THE CHILDREN

FROM AUTUMN COLDS

The fall is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm while the next is wet and cold, and unless the mother is on her guard the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mothers' best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose will prevent cold or if cold does come on suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will quickly cure it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The human stomach stands much abuse but it won't return good health if you give it bad food.

If you feed right you should feel right, for proper food and a good mind is the safe road to health.

"A year ago I became much alarmed about my health for I began to suffer after each meal no matter how little I ate," says a Western woman.

"I lost my appetite and the very thought of food grew distasteful, with the result that I was not nourished and got weak and thin.
"My home cares were very heavy, for beide a large family of my own for beide a large family of my own mother. There was no one to shoulder my household burdens, and come what might I must bear them, and this thought nearly drove me frantic when I realized that by health was breaking down.

Permanent prohibition of the sale of absinthe and kindred alcoholic bevof absinthe and kindred alcoholic beverages in France may be a result of the war. Transportation and sale of absinthe were forbidden when the war began, but traffic in other intoxicants was continued. The government has now supplemented its original order with another forbidding the sale of any alcoholic drinks similar to absynthe. There is a marked movement in all parts of France tending to perpetuate this prohibiton.
